

An ode to Georg Gustav Huff's Kerner Halbtrocken

Kerner is a grape from Rheinhessen,
Whose fame too much sugar did lessen,
Huff made it 'halbtrocken',
Half dry it is rockin',
Would you like to quaff a crisp Hessian?

Three Generations of the Huff
Family.

Georg Gustav Huff and family have been growing wine on the steeply sloped banks of the river Rhine since 1710.

Though Kerner is a lesser known grape that is often considered a variety for inferior sweet wine, Huff's Kerner Halbtrocken is consistently one of Candid Wines' best sellers. The Huff's secret lies in the thirty five to forty year old vines that grow the wine and the family's dedication to preserving crisp acidity. The result is a balanced wine that is fabulous with a wide range of food. Take a bottle of Huff Kerner to your next Thai or Mexican BYOB and you'll see what we mean.
